Lexipol Corrections Grant Program:

Lexipol is a risk management company that provides the framework and recommendations for law enforcement agencies to develop public safety policy manuals online, and then provides training on the policy for officers. Lexipol works with individual agencies to help them design policies that best meet the needs of their department and community. The policies are based on best practices and current case rulings from the State of Oregon, the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, and the U.S. Supreme Court.

The master content serves as the base from which your agency's policy manual is built. Your policy manual then stands as the cornerstone for developing procedure manuals, and for online training efforts related to those policy and procedure manuals to which your agency subscribes.

Lexipol uses a web-based system called Knowledge Management Services (KMS) to deliver this content to subscribers. KMS provides current, relevant and verifiable information along with training in five key functional areas that are critical to successful management in public safety. These five key functional areas are:

- People
- Policy
- Training
- Supervision
- Discipline

These five areas require ongoing review of best practices and recent case decisions to help manage corrections employees and departments. Being able to monitor these changes, interpret and translate the changes and demonstrate how they affect corrections on a state and national level is a key benefit of becoming a Lexipol member.

In addition, the policy manual content developed by Lexipol is compatible with any accreditation standards. Lexipol automatically cross-reference's applicable policy with accreditation standards.

Current pricing of the Lexipol policy manual is listed below.
